

You are at work when someone requests an unscheduled team meeting. The team includes both hearing and Deaf team members. You need to let the team know about this meeting both in English and Irish Sign Language. But you don't have any ISL.

Imagine an app existed that could accurately translate between English and ISL. People on the team could use this app to communicate with each other in sign languages and spoken languages.

Questions

How would you feel about using this technology?

How would it change your experience at work?

Are there other situations where this type of technology could be useful?